Copyright Notice

1. The piece of writing herein, including its title and any prefatory materials, such as its preface, table of contents, and index, is referred to as ‘the article’. It may be in the form of a letter addressed to one or more individuals or companies. It may have been referred to as a study, a section, a subsection, a paragraph, a chapter, or a letter.
2. The article is copyrighted by Dr. Richard Cordero, Esq., hereinafter also referred to as Dr. Cordero or the author, and all rights are reserved.
3. This copyright notice must be interpreted broadly to the end of affording Dr. Cordero the most comprehensive protection under U.S. law and the law of a third country, whichever is more protective of the rights of the author.
4. The standard of interpretation, i.e., of construction, applicable to this notice is that of a reasonable person acting in good faith with the intent to comply with all copyright provisions under U.S. law or the law of a third country. Therefore, the standard is ‘If in doubt, ask the author of this notice or article’, that is, Dr. Cordero.
5. If you have, or a person under your control or a person consulted on the application of this copyright notice has, any doubt, concern, or question as to the proper interpretation of this copyright notice or its application to this article or to its publication or reproduction, you must contact Dr. Cordero and request and receive clarification in writing before publishing or reproducing the article.
  - a. This copyright notice is subject to amendment by Dr. Cordero. The version of it that controls is the one that appears at http://Judicial-Discipline-Reform.org/docs/DrRCordero\_copyright\_info.pdf at the time when the publication or reproduction of the article is being considered. The subsequent publication or reproduction of the article is controlled by the version of this copyright notice that appears at that location at such subsequent time of publication or reproduction.
6. The study in which this article may be contained is also copyrighted, namely, Dr. Cordero’s study of judges and their judiciaries, titled and downloadable for personal, non-commercial purposes thus:

Exposing Judges’ Unaccountability and Consequent Riskless Wrongdoing:

7. The copyright is asserted by Dr. Cordero only as to his original text, graphics, editorial enhancements, layout, and/or compilation, but not as to the equivalent work contained in the article and authored or published by a third party, who may assert its own copyright.
8. Permission is granted for a private person and for a non-commercial publisher, such as the owner of a website that deals with judicial and legal issues, to publish or reproduce this article totally without any modification to its text, graphics, or their meaning or intent, provided proper credit is given to the author, Dr. Richard Cordero, Esq., and the article's link, i.e., universal resource locator or url, accompanies any publication or reproduction of it, namely, http://Judicial-Discipline-Reform.org/OL/DrRCordero-Honest\_Jud\_Advocates.pdf as well as the link to his website, <http://Judicial-Discipline-Reform.org>. This permission is not applicable to the study referred to in paragraph 7 above or to an article that is longer than 20 pages in its original format, including page size, font type and size, and layout, used by Dr. Cordero.
9. Work contained in the article and authored or published by a third party that is reproduced must not have any modification to its text, graphics, tables, lists, and any other content, or their meaning or intent and proper credit must be given to the third party as well as to the preparer of the article, that is, Dr. Cordero, and:
  - a. the links of such work must accompany its reproduction; or
  - b. such work is accompanied by the notice: "Found in [title of, and link to, Dr. Cordero's article in question]."
10. Permission is required whenever this article and any two or more other articles authored or produced by Dr. Cordero are published in the same work, publication, media, or website simultaneously or over time.
11. Prior written permission is required for publication of this article in a book either alone or with the work of one or more third parties.
